1. For some months, representatives of CIA and Defense have exchanged views and information on the alignment of CIA and Defense responsibilities in unconventional warfare preparation While these informal discussions have not led to any formally agreed conclusions, we feel that they are a base for more effective synchronization of our respective roles in the future. 25

2. We did not have a firm opinion on the alignment of these roles when this exchange began. As a result of these discussions, we now feel that the CIA program, as now oriented, should be continued by CIA. Our present concept of this program is fully within the CIA role in war preparation, as defined by the Director of Central Intelligence in Reference A with the agreement of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (Reference B).

3. While we have concluded that CIA should continue this program we are continuing to review CIA activities elsewhere in the unconventional warfare field. As we find cases meriting discussion of CIA and Defense 25
